Become an ADA Student Member

Join ADA today and help yourself to resources you can use to boost your grades and get a strong start to your career.

With an ADA Student Membership, you can start networking and learning real-world insights now which can pay off later.

Join online at www.eatright.org

Take time right now and fill out the attached application—or go to www.eatright.org and apply online.

The sooner you do, the sooner you can enjoy all the benefits of ADA membership.

ADA membership offers many benefits for dietetics students, including five you can use right now:

1 Find ADA scholarships. Look to ADA for new sources of information on financial aid options, including a wide variety of scholarships offered only to ADA members.

2 Search for specific jobs. Use ADACareerLink, our online job service, to post your résumé or respond directly to employers' job listings. With ADACareerLink, you can search by job specialty and/or geographic location, and receive e-mail alerts about new postings.

3 Network with other dietetics students and food and nutrition professionals. You'll find that ADA members are willing to share their experience and expertise with each other. Start networking and learn real-world insights when you join one of ADA's 29 dietetic practice groups, or 3 member interest groups, many of which have student rates. You can also join the online Student Council Community of Interest, as well as the state affiliate association of your choice. And student members enjoy discounted registration rates for the annual Food & Nutrition Conference & Expo (FNCE), October 25-28, 2008 in Chicago, Illinois. Come to FNCE for Student Forum sessions, educational sessions and an industry Expo.

4 Access research you can use in class now. The online Evidence Analysis Library provides 24/7 access to the best scientific and evidence-based information on hot topics like childhood overweight, disorders of lipid metabolism, adult weight management, and nutrition for the critically ill. The Journal online features fully-searchable access to the premier source for the practice and science of food, nutrition, and dietetics. These are just a few of the many online resources you can use to gather information and the latest research you need for your dietetics classes.

5 Learn about the profession. Whether you're gathering information for a class project or studying the dietetics profession, ADA publications contain all the information you need. When you join, you'll automatically receive:

- Student Scoop: Published five times a school year, this online publication provides information on student leadership opportunities and activities.
- ADA Times: Voted number one new benefit among members, ADA Times magazine features the challenges you face in the field, new professional trends that could affect your career and issues that may challenge the way you think and feel about relevant topics.
- Daily News: You can subscribe to Daily News and receive a daily e-mail providing up-to-the-minute leading food, nutrition and health news.
- Journal of the American Dietetic Association: The premier source for the practice and science of food, nutrition and dietetics.
